TO-DAY AND TO-MORROW.

Small need have those who love romance,
In battle-fields to court her,
Where cannons boom, whose chargers prance,
The roads to strife are shorter;
Each man who earns his daily bread,
His enemies past number;
Hope's dying feelings, crushed or dead,
His onward march encumber,
Still bravely join life's fiery fray,
And sternly cope with sorrow;
The man that bears his cross to-day,
Will have a chance to-morrow.

Hopes, fears, desires, in myriads crowd
Our mortal pathway o'er,
The spirit's pure perceptions cloud,
And clog sublime endeavor;
Grief, shame, remorse and fierce despair
Bring legions to confound us—
Such are the dangers we must dare!
Such are the spells around us!
Yet lift thy shield with courage gay,
And hurl thy lance at sorrow;
The man who steels his face to-day
Can meet the foe to-morrow.

Steer, pilot, for some glorious end,
Though late in port arriving,
Heaven's grace, like manna, will descend
And sanctify the striving;
Good for thy life resolve to do,
And evil shall avoid thee;
Doubt may have made thy pulse untrue—
Sloth may have misemployed thee—
Crush out these attributes of clay,
Stamp on the neck of sorrow;
The man that perseveres to-day,
Will meet success to-morrow.

Anecdotes of Stephen Girard.

A paper read by Dr. W. M. Cornell at the last meeting of the New England Historic-Genealogical Society, in Boston, gave the following interesting anecdotes of Stephen Girard:—

Stephen Girard was the sole judge of his beneficence. If rightly approached, he would give largely; but if dictated to or treated rudely, he would not give at all. Samuel Coates, one of the old Friends, knew how to manage Girard, while many who sought aid from him were unsuccessful. Mr. Coates was one of the managers of the "Pennsylvania Hospital," which was then much in want of funds. He undertook to get a donation from Mr. Girard, and, meeting him in the street, stated his object. Mr. Girard asked him to come to him next morning.

Mr. Coates called and found Mr. Girard at breakfast. He asked him to take some, which Mr. Coates did. After breakfast Mr. Coates said, "Well Stephen, we will proceed to business." "Well, what have you come for, Samuel?" said Mr. Girard. "Just what thee pleases, Stephen," replied Mr. Coates. Girard drew a check for $2000, which Mr. Coates put in his pocket without looking at it. "What! not look at the check I gave you!" said Mr. Girard. "No; beggars must not be choosers, Stephen," said Mr. Coates. "Hand me back again the check I gave you," demanded Girard. "No, no, Stephen; a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," said Mr. Coates. "By George!" said Girard, "you have caught me on the right footing." He then drew a check for $5000, and presented it to Mr. Coates, observing, "Will you look at it?" "Well, to please thee, Stephen, I will," said Mr. Coates. "Now, give me back the first check," demanded Mr. Girard, which was accordingly done.

The Rev. Dr. Stoughton, an eminent Baptist minister of Philadelphia, did not understand Mr. Girard so well as Mr. Coates did. When they were about building their meeting-house in Samson street, Dr. Stoughton called on Mr. Girard for aid. Girard received him, as he usually did beggars, coolly but courteously, and gave him a check for $500. Dr. Stoughton received it with a low bow; but, upon examining it, expressed his astonishment, adding "only $500! Surely you will not give us less than $1000." "Let me see the check, Mr. Stoughton," said Girard; "perhaps I have made one mistake." The Dr. returned him the check. With the utmost sang froid Girard tore it into fragments, observing, "Well, Mr. Stoughton, if you will not have what I give, I will give nothing." The Dr. left him, exceedingly mortified.

Girard had no preference for one sect more than for another, and he gave to build churches merely to improve the city.

The methodists wished to build a church in Tenth street, just north of Chestnut. Thomas Haskins a merchant, and a neighbor of Girard, called on him, and urged his suit for aid in very modest terms. Girard replied, "I approve of your object," and presented him a check for $500. The Methodist society failed, and the house was bought by the Episcopalians, who wished to alter it into the splendid Gothic house now called St. Stephen's Church. A committee waited upon Mr. Girard, told him their plan, and asked his aid. He gave them a check for $500. They were disappointed, and said, "Why, you gave the Methodists $500 for their little church, and we are going to build a more splendid edifice, and surely you will give us something comporting with the grandeur of our design. Have you not omitted a cypher? They returned him the check, asking him to make it $5000. Girard tore it in pieces, and added: "I will not give you one cent. Your society is rich—the Methodists are poor. You remind me of the rich man in the Gospel. He would pull down and build greater. Profit by his fate, gentlemen. I have nothing for your splendid church."

☞Sometimes there are living beings in nature as beautiful as in romance. Reality surpasses imagination; and we see breathing, brightening and moving before our eyes sights dearer to our hearts than any we ever beheld in the land of sleep.

How to Speak to Children.

It is usual to attempt the management of children either by corporeal punishments, or by rewards addressed to the senses, and by words alone. There is one other means of government, the power and importance of which is little regarded; I refer to the human voice—the soft, gentle, soothing modulations of the human voice; and this seems to me to be the most excellent way. A blow may be inflicted on a child, accompanied with words so uttered as to counteract entirely its effect; or the parent may use language in the correction of a child, not objectionable in itself, yet spoken in a tone which more than defeats its influence. Let any one endeavor to recall the image of a fond mother long since at rest in heaven. Her sweet smile and ever clear countenance are brought vividly to recollection; so also is her voice—the tones of her voice; and blessed is that parent who is endowed with a pleasing utterance. A sweet voice is a great moral power if it be employed wisely. What is it which lulls the infant to repose? It is not an array of mere words. There is no charm to the untaught one in mere letters, syllables, and words. It is the sound striking the little ear that soothes and composes it to sleep. A few notes, however unskillfully arranged, if uttered in a soft tone are found to possess a magic influence to quiet and prepare for repose. Think we that this influence is confined to the cradle? No, it is diffused over every age, and ceases not while the child remains under the parental roof. Is the boy growing rude in manner and boisterous in speech? I know of no instrument so sure to control those tendencies as the gentle tones of a mother's voice. She who speaks to her son harshly does but give to his evil conduct the sanction of her own example. She pours oil on the already raging flame. In the pressure of duty we are liable to utter ourselves harshly to our children. Perhaps a threat is expressed in a loud and irritating tone; instead of allaying the passions of the child, it serves directly to increase them. Every fretful expression awakens in him the same spirit which produced it. So does a pleasant voice call up agreeable feelings. Whatever disposition, therefore, we would encourage in a child, the same we should manifest in the tone in which we address it. Anger, severity of reproof, harsh words are of all things the worst. They excite evil passions, lead to resistance, and become the stimulants of disobedience and evil conduct. Speak gently to the child.—Ch. Intelligencer.

WHAT IS POLITE SOCIETY?—Ask a member of that highly-polished guild what he understands by the phrase, Polite Society, and he will tell you that it signifies a select association of ladies and gentlemen by whom the laws prescribed by courtesy and good-breeding are strictly observed. He will not say that obedience to the polite code often involves deliberate treason to truth and candor. Yet so it is. Put the same question to a cynical despiser of etiquette, and he will insist that Polite Society is neither more nor less than a congeries of conventional hypocrites, governed by rules which forbid the bold utterance of unpleasant truths and sanction the use of flattering falsehoods. The cynic's opinion, though somewhat harsh, will be found, upon the whole, correct. To be courteous, in the true, Christian sense of the word—for courtesy is a Christian virtue—it is not necessary to be mendacious. To revile a person whom we happen to dislike would be unnecessary and ungentlemanly; but to flatter and compliment him is a piece of unmanly meanness. Polite Society when off parade, and resolved back into its domestic elements, is even more bitter and acrimonious than the unpolished vulgar. It indemnifies itself behind the scenes for the part it plays in public, by satirizing, abusing and condemning the very people to whom it has recently rendered homage. It is an artificial system, founded on the grand mistake that it is impossible to be at once courteous and sincere. Depend upon it, there is very little Christian charity in Polite Society.

A PROUD MAN'S BONES.—Of all the farces which disfigure the human soul, not one is more foolish than pride. Its folly was practically illustrated by that surly old cynic, Diogenes, who, while examining a heap of bones, was accosted by Alexander the Great.

"What are you looking for?" asked the proud monarch.

"For the bones of your father, but I cannot distinguish them from those of his slaves," replied the philosopher.

If the cynic was rude he was also right. In the end the king and the slaves are alike. As both come alike naked into this world, so both leave it alike naked. Both come and go with nothing. How foolish then for the one to lord it over the other during the brief interval between the cradle and the grave! The proudest man on earth is only dust. Why should he despise his fellows who are made of the same material, and are inheritors of the same destiny? Consider this, O proud heart, and take lessons in the school of Christ, who was meek and lowly in heart.

☞"Persevere, persevere," said an old lady to her maid; "it's the only way you can accomplish great things." One day eight apple dumplings were sent down stairs, and they all disappeared. "Sally, where are those dumplings?" "I managed to get through them, ma'am," replied Sally. "Why, how on earth did you manage to get through so many dumplings?" "I persevered, ma'am."

Race Between a Fast Horse and a Fasting Hog.

Some years ago a race was run at the Hague, in Holland, which for its novelty, excited more than ordinary interest. It was between a fast trotting horse in harness and a full grown hog—single heat—distance six English miles—for a wager of one thousand guilders.

The circumstances which led to this unique trial of speed were as follows: At a sporting club at the Hague, a young member expatiated upon the beauty, symmetry and extraordinary speed of a trotting horse he had that day purchased, expressing an eager desire to get up a match to prove the superior qualities of his horse. A gentleman engaged in a hand of cards, but whose attention had been attracted by the ardent and impassioned words of the speaker, quickly remarked: "Come sir, don't be bragging so much about the swiftness of your horse. I have a hog which for a trifling wager, I would not hesitate to run against him." Peals of laughter greeted this strange proposal, to which, when partially subsided, the owner of Grunty quietly interposed: "Well, gentlemen, I now challenge to run my hog Nero against that gentleman's fast trotter in harness, one straight heat, six English miles, for 1,000 guilders a side." "Done done!" was the eager response from many voices. "Provided," the challenger resumed, "that the horse carry two persons, and that fourteen days' time be allowed me for training my animal."—"Agreed! agreed!" responded all around; for the joke was deemed too good and too novel to give it the go-by.

Preliminaries being satisfactorily arranged and the stakes deposited, it was agreed that the match should come off that day fortnight at eleven o'clock, a. m., precisely; and the beautiful avenue leading from the Hague to the sea shore at Scheveningen was selected as the course. The news of this extraordinary match for a trial of speed between a fast trotting horse and a full grown porker spread like wildfire, and caused the most intense excitement, not alone in sporting circles, but among the people generally—all eager to see the fun. The day was anxiously looked for, and the training of Nero began.

On the first day poor Nero was starved; strict orders having been given by his owner that no one should feed him, himself alone attending to the matter. On the second day Nero was pretty sharp set when, punctually at 11 o'clock, his master made his appearance. A rope was securely fastened to one of his hind trotters, and his master drove him, with many a kick and forcible persuasion, all the way over the course to Scheveningen, where he fed him upon a scanty meal of two herrings, which Nero ravenously devoured; after which he had to trot it back to Hague. It may be proper here to remark that the hog prefers fish to any other kind of food.

On the third day Nero felt perfectly ravenous, but he had to abide his time, and his master had to resort to the strictest hog discipline to start him off when, at 11 o'clock, he presented himself to drive him over the course. After a liberal and energetic application of the booted foot, and a little loud and angry discussion between the two parties, they arrived at their journey's end, where Nero was regaled with 3 herrings, being one extra, which he dispatched voraciously in double-quick time, looking for more, but in vain.—He was then, with much coaxing and kicking, persuaded to resume the return trip homeward, which was safely accomplished, although not without considerable opposition, accompanied by vigorous squealing and determined grunting on the part of Nero.

On the fourth day, punctually at 11 o'clock, when his master presented himself, Nero appeared to understand somewhat the object of his calling; he walked off, not only without compulsion, but with considerable alacrity, at a good round pace, to get to his journey's end, where his master regaled him, not alone with his coveted dinner of three herrings, but a reward for his tractability and good conduct, with one herring extra, which Nero devoured withe incredible velocity as soon as they came within reach of his grinders.

On the fifth day Nero was fully up to the game, and his master experienced considerable difficulty in keeping up with him. At Scheveningen the usual allowance—now four herrings—was placed at his disposal, and disposed of by him in short metre.

On the days following, and up to the time of the race, his master had no further difficulty with Nero than to keep up with him, Nero invariably taking the lead, although on the return trips the same difficulties always recurred. A vigorous application of boots was in such cases the only convincing argument with Nero, who never could see the point nor comprehend the necessity for this back-track movement, and ever obstreperously squealed or grunted his objections, deeming this extra exercise probably superfluous to his health, as he had never shown any signs either of dyspepsia or indigestion. But be that as it may, Nero had to submit to strict discipline, his master intending to thus train him up to fame and renown.

On the ninth day Nero had become perfectly trained, and having grown extremely thin upon his scanty meals, he now run like a race-horse—a veritable Eclipse—invariably distancing his master, who followed with a fast trotting horse in harness. Both exercise and spare diet were, however, adhered to up to the day preceding the one on which the race was to come off. On that, the thirteenth day, as on the first day poor Nero was again starved. At the usual hour of eleven his master appeared, but Nero was doomed to disappointment—no trot, no herrings on that day. With eager eye and impatient grunt he signified his desire to be released from his pen; but alas, it was not to be; he had to submit to a day of fasting and prayer—or, at least, prepare for the race.

On the fourteenth day both horse and hog appeared at the starting-post, eager for the race. It was a beautiful day, and the road was lined the entire distance, on both sides, with anxious and delighted spectators eager to see the sport. Punctually at 11 o'clock, at tap of drum, off they started, amidst the shouts and hurrahs of the multitude. The first two miles were closely contested—it was emphatically a neck and neck race; but Nero, as light as feather, and having in his mind's eye, probably, the delectable meal, now fairly flew over the course, leaving the horse behind, keeping the lead the entire distance. Amidst shouts and hurrahs, waving of handkerchiefs, and the wildest excitement, he reached the ending post, beating the horse by half a mile, and winning the race triumphantly.

For this extraordinary performance Nero was rewarded with a pailful of herrings, and having feasted upon which to his heart's content, he walked back to the Hague, in the care of his master, "the admired of all admirers." His master, pocketing the purse of one thousand guilders, generously spent one hundred guilders for Nero's portrait, which is now preserved at the sportman's club at the Hague.

Honor Your Business.

It is a good sign when a man is proud of his work or his calling. Yet nothing is more common than to hear men finding fault constantly with their particular business, and deeming themselves unfortunate because fastened to it by the necessity of gaining a livelihood. In this men fret, and laboriously destroy all their comfort in the work; or they change their business, and go on miserably, shifting from one thing to another, till the grave or the poor-house gives them a fast grip. But while occasionally a man fails in life because he is not in the place fitted for his peculiar talent, it happens ten times oftener that failure results from neglect and even contempt of an honest business. A man should put his heart into everything that he does. There is not a profession that has not its peculiar cares and vexations No man will escape annoyance by changing his business. No mechanical business is altogether agreeable. Commerce, in its endless varieties, is affected, like all other pursuits, with trials, unwelcome duties, and spirit-tiring necessities. It is the very wantoness of folly for a man to search out the frets and burdens of his calling, and give his mind every day to a consideration of them. They belong to human life. They are inevitable. Brooding over them only gives them strength. On the other hand, a man has power given to him to shed beauty and pleasure on the homeliest toil, if he is wise. Let a man adopt his business and identify it with his life, and cover it with pleasant associations; for God has given us imagination, not alone to make some poets, but to enable all men to beautify homely things. Heart varnish will cover up innumerable evils and defects.—Lood at the good things. Accept your lot as a man does a piece of rugged ground, and begin to get out the rocks and roots, to deepen and mellow the soil, to enrich and plant it. There is something in the most forbidding avocation around which a man may twine pleasant fancies, out of which he may develop an honest pride.

A CHARMING CUSTOM.—Somebody, evidently an old bachelor used to such things, thus describes how they do in Maine: "Quaker young ladies in the Maine Law State, it is said, still continue to kiss the lips of the young temperance men to see if they have been tampering with liquor. Just imagine a beautiful young temperance woman, with all the dignity of an executive officer, and the innocence of a dove, with the charge, "Mr.——the ladies believe you are in the habit of tampering with liquor, and they have appointed me to examine you according to our established rules; are you willing?"—You nod acquiescence. She gently steps closer to you, lays her white arm around your neck, dashes back her raven curls, raises her sylphlike form upon tip toe, her snowy, heaving bosom against your own, and with her angelic features lit up with a smile as sweet as heaven, place her rich, rosy, pouty, sugar, molasses, lily, rosebud, tart, apple pie, peach pudding, apple dumpling, ginger bread, nectar lips, against yours, and (O Jerusalem, hold us!) kisses you. Hurrah for the girls and Maine Law, and death to all opposition.

"STAND ASIDE, MY SON."—A big whisky guzzling fellow came home drunk one night and sat down by the fire to warm his feet, which were "regular worm killers." After dozing some time, he awoke chilly; the embers were entirely hid from his view, and seeing his feet, mistook them for his little boy, when with a majestic side wave of his hand he said; "Stand aside, my son, and let your poor father warm himself."

CURIOUS INSTINCT OF THE HOG.—It is common for farmers who reside in the thinly settled tracts of the United States, to suffer their hogs to run at large. These animals feed upon the acorns, which are very abundant in our extensive forests, and in this situation they often become wild and ferocious. A gentlemen, while traveling some years ago, through the wilds of Vermont, perceived at a little distance before him a herd of swine, and his attention was arrested by the agitation they exhibited. He quickly perceived a number of young pigs in the centre of the herd, and that the hogs were arranged about them in a conical form, having their heads all turned outwards. At the apex of this singular cone a huge boar had placed himself, who, from his size seemed to be the master of the herd. The traveler now observed that a famished wolf was attempting, by various manœuvres, to seize on the pigs in the middle; but, wherever he made an attack, the huge boar at the apex of the cone presented himself—the hogs dexterously arranging themselves on each side of him, so as to preserve the position of defence just mentioned. The attention of the traveler was for a moment withdrawn, and upon turning to view the combatants, he was surprised to find the herd of swine dispersed, and the wolf no longer to be seen. On riding up to the spot, the wolf was discovered dead on the ground, a rent being made in his side more than a foot in length—the boar, no doubt, having seized a favorable opportunity, and with a sudden plunge dispatched his adversary with his formidable tusks. It is a little remarkable that the ancient Romans among the various methods they devised for drawing up their armies in battle, had one exactly resembling the posture assumed by the swine above mentioned. The mode of attack was called Cuneus, or Caput porcinum.—Silliman's Journal.

ONIONS AND EPIDEMICS.—The following item in reference to the efficacy of onions in times of epidemics was contributed by John B. Wolfe to the Scientific American:

In the spring of 1849 I was in charge of one hundred men on shipboard, with the cholera among the men. We had onions, which a number of the men ate freely. Those who did so were soon attacked, and nearly all died. As soon as I made this discovery their use was forbidden. After mature reflection I came to the conclusion that onions should never be eaten during the prevalence of epidemics, for the reason that they absorb the virus and communicate the disease, and that the proper use for them is sliced and placed in the sick room, and replaced with fresh ones every few hours.

It is a well-established fact that onions will extract the poison of snakes; this I personally know. Some kinds of mud will do the same.

After maintaining the foregoing opinion for eighteen years, I have found the following facts well attested: Onions placed in the room where there is small-pox will blister, and decompose with great rapidity; not only so, but will prevent the spread of the disease. I think as a disinfectant they have no equal, when properly used; but keep them out of the stomach.

THE SECRET OF ELOQUENCE.—I owe my success in life to one single fact, viz: That at the ago of twenty-seven I commenced, and continued for years, the process of daily reading and speaking upon the contents of some historical and scientific book. These off-hand efforts were made sometimes in a cornfield, at others in a forest, and not unfrequently in some distant barn, with the horse and ox for my auditors. It is to this early practice, in the great art of all arts, that I am indebted for the primary and leading impulses that stimulated me forward, and shaped and modelled my entire subsequent destiny. Improve then, young gentlemen, the superior advantages you here enjoy. Let not a day pass without exercising your powers of speech. There is no power like that of oratory. Cæsar controlled men by captivating their affections and swaying their passions. The influence of the one perished with its author, that of the other continues to this day.—Henry Clay.

HOW TO DISCOVER A WOMAN'S AGE.—In a translation from Honore de Balzac we find the following: "When you think it to your interest to discover a woman's age, scrutinize respectively her temples and the end of her nose! Whatever women may effect with their cosmetics, there is not wax and perfumery enough in America to corrupt such witnesses as the marks imprinted by experience and excitement on the temples and the end of the nose. There each of her years has left its stigma. When the temples of a woman are attenuated, faded and furrowed, when at the end of the nose you see certain little points that resemble the almost imperceptible slack particles that are rained by the chimneys of London, the woman has passed thirty years. She may be beautiful, she may may be spiritual, she may be animated, she may be anything you desire—but she has passed thirty years; she has reached her maturity."

☞A Mr. Jones has recently revived the phonetic system in England. It is only prejudice of the eye, says Mr. Jones, that keeps us from saying: "Dic, give Jac a kic, when Jac gave Dic a pge on the bac with a thic stic."

☞Connecticut is to be the next great battle field of the pending political campaign. Her election for Governor, Legislature, and State officers occurs the 6th of April next. This State went Democratic last year by 987 majority. It is being thoroughly canvassed by speakers of both parties, and the issue is very doubtful.

☞It appears to be the determination of some of the Republican press of the State to "kill off" Andy Curtin as a candidate for Vice President. The party of the State in State Convention made his nomination by a heavy majority. He is as much the nominee of the party of the State as Hartranft and Campbell are. Bolting nominations may become respectable if Andy Curtin should be foully dealt with by his own State at Chicago. If he should not be nominated we hope his own State will not be responsible for his defeat.

Where a factious influential few exist, who use no means to increase the number of voters for their party candidates unless they, the candidates, are of the "ring," we of course do not expect as fair a hearing or a support as liberal as we do from men who are devoted more to the success of their party than they are to their own selfish political advancement.

FROM WASHINGTON.

THE IMPEACHMENT.

The Trial Commences.

WASHINGTON, March 23, 1868.

At 1 o'clock the President pro tem. of the Senate, Benjamin Wade, announced that the hour had arrived for the proceeding to consideration of the articles of impeachment against the President of the United States. Chief Justice Chase entered the room from the Vice President's room and occupied the Chair. The sergeant at arms made the usual proclamation, and immediately after, the Managers of Impeachment upon the part of the House were announced. At ten minutes past 1 o'clock the Chief Justice called the Court to order, and directed the Secretary to read the journal.

Mr. Stanberry arose, and remarked that he and his brother counsel had been engaged every hour since the Court last met in preparing an answer. Even this time was too brief. Nevertheless he hoped the answer would be found sufficient. Judge Curtis then proceeded to read the answer.

The trial of Jeff Davis, originally set for the 25th day of this month, and formally postponed last week by Judge Underwood to the fourteenth of April will, it is thought by some persons, be again put off till about the first Monday in May. This further change will be made by the Government for its own convenience.

—The Pennsylvania Railroad company transported on their main line of road between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh and its branches, during the year 1867, three millions, three hundred and fifty-seven thousand four hundred and eighty-six passengers.

NEWSPAPORIAL.—Mr. H. R. Holsinger has sold out his interest in the Tyrone Herald to Mr. J. L. Holmes, the former editor. The paper which before was neutral, is now to be Republican. We wish the new incumbent success.

—Messrs. Hoover & Son have disposed of the Hollidaysburg Register to Messrs. David Over and Jacob E. Over, of Bedford. Mr. David Over has had long experience in the publication of various journals, and we sincerely trust he will meet with continued success in his favorite calling.

—The Pittsburg Gazette came to us on Monday last with an entire new dress, and changed to a quarto form. The change is greatly for the better. This paper, which is published in the interests of the Republican party, has always been marked for its enterprise and ability, and we are pleased to note any evidences of its prosperity.

—We have received a few copies of a neat six column daily paper, called the Evening Bulletin, published at Kansas City, Missouri. We are pleased to see that Hon. G. W. Householder, formerly of Bedford county, is one of the editors. The paper is for Grant and Curtin.

A. H. Stephens.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Herald, having exhausted the patience of "Old Ben Wade," has turned his attention to the ex-Vice President, and gives the following account of his talk with that notoriety:—

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Alexander H. Stephens, the ex-Vice President of the ex-Confederacy, arrived here the day before yesterday en route to his home in Augusta, Georgia. Last evening your correspondent paid him a visit at his temporary residence, and spent a pleasant half hour in conversation with him on subjects of a national character, as well as on the social and political condition of the South. He received us in his bed room, and apologized for wearing his hat on the score of suffering from an attack of neuralgia in the head. Mr. Stephens looked in better health than we anticipated, but there is a visible feebleness in his frame which would seem to be a chronic infirmity of his existence. We asked him what view he took of the tendency of events as regards that preservation of the liberties of the people and the maintenance of that necessary diffusion of the powers of government by which our Constitution has designed to provide against usurpation and centralization.

He replied:—It is apparent that we are tending to centralization. Both in the light of philosophy and the precedents of history this is seen. From the federative system established by our Constitution we are approaching Asiatic Government, which is the concentration of all the functions of government in one, and makes all the others subservient and moved only by the dictation of the power in the ascendancy. We recognize in the Godhead a trinity which combines three essentials, which nature seems to have fixed as the necessary attributes of perfect government. This same principle is recognizable in man, the image of Divinity and the instrument of executing the great purpose for which nature was created. Man is himself a trinity. There is the physical, the intellectual, and the moral, three distinct elements, without any of which such a thing as man would be impossible. The same exhibition of a triune organism existed in government. There is the executive, the legislative and the judicial, and without these, acting independently yet in harmony, perfect government cannot exist. The great conflicts of nations during more than three centuries, or since the dawn of constitutional governments, have been to dissolve this concentration of power, this Asiatic theory, and disentangle the web which ages of darkness and oppression had woven around the web of governmental power. Divine law dictates that a diffusion of power be made and kept separate in order properly to answer certain ends. It is impossible to controvert or defeat divine law by human law without experiencing the convulsions incident to such violations, tho' human laws may be made answerable to the wants of mankind by making them yield to the imperative operations of the higher laws. The Government established by the colonies, when thus in a condition to act for themselves, was upon the principle which actuated the opposition in the first instance. They recognized the federative system, and formed a constitution embodying the governmental trinity—an executive to endorse the laws, a legislature to enact laws, and a judiciary to protect, construe, and interpret the laws. The efficacy of this system, which then became practicable, if not an American idea, certainly then became an American institution, and to all the nations in modern times that have been struggling for the same system, probably in a more dignified form; as regarded the universality of the exercise of these powers as a franchise of the masses, the utility of the system as well as its tendency to develop the material, intellectual and social condition of a people has been well demonstrated. But the events of the past few years have assumed a reactionary tendency, and in the legislative body of the nation a very palpable disposition is shown to centralization, and not only as a controvertial question of the relative powers and ascendancy of the representative body of the government, but a direct usurpation of the freedom and isolation of the executive and judiciary in their spheres of action. The curbing of the freedom of the judiciary is a fatal blow to the justice or the force of the laws. By controlling the exercise of judicial power in the exercise of its grave and responsible duty, it would be impossible to have any other than a decision such as the legislative, in the enactment of the law, contemplated should be the purpose of the law.

He said, further, impeachment had the same tendency. Though the Constitution provides for impeachment, the question of crime or misdemeanor is one which involves in the present case an interminable inquiry into the legitimate scope of the legislative arm of the Government, into the constitutionality of the laws which it is alleged have been violated, and whether the franchise of citizenship, freedom of opinion, is suppressed for the time being, during the investment of the high official functions of President. But one thing is certain, he remarked—the precedent established will be equivalent to an aggression which might be at any time repeated if the absence of subserviency on the part of the Executive should give rise to a division with the legislative. In this view the projected measure is inimical to the independence, the dignity, the inviolability and the security of the executive office.

To the question as to what was his opinion of the political prospects of the South, Mr. Stephens said he thought the prospects of the South were gloomy in the extreme. He saw nothing but utter ruin. The promiscuous enfranchisement of the blacks throws the control of six of the Southern States entirely into the hands of an inferior race; that for a time the blacks might be satisfied to exercise their political privileges in harmony with the whites, but with the knowledge of the power thus placed in their hands it would be but natural for them in a short time to insist upon exercising that power to the exclusion of the whites.

A swarthy face, closely matted wool, a flat nose, and thick lips, with the sterling physical development indicating an unbroken descent from an African parentage, are alone recognized as suitable qualifications to represent the new instalment of American citizens.

While he disagreed as to the judiciousness of granting universal suffrage to the negro, he was still in favor of granting the right in a restricted sense. He thought that by fixing some standard to attain which would accord the electoral franchise, would establish a premium upon merit, and kindle a necessary ambition to self-improvement, and while thus protecting the right of suffrage from abuse it would place it in the hands of those who know, at least in a measure its value, and how to employ it. Now I think the policy of Mr. Johnson was generally accepted by the thinking people of the South as the true grounds of a restoration of harmony between the two sections. Indeed, I think this was the unanimous opinion of the people; and in the enforcement of the opposite policy, it is a fixed conviction with them that their doom is sealed. A war of races seems to be the inevitable consequence. That it will come, and at no distant day, is evident by the clanish tendencies already shown by the blacks.

Well, what will the white population do in such an event?

One of two things—quit the country or remain and fall. For my part my mind is made up. I have not long to live. I will stay and go down with the ship. But to the young, I would counsel them to find homes elsewhere.

Mr. Stephens was deeply affected at this portion of his conversation, and with a firmness of tone, a flash of the eye, he rose to his feet, and nervously striking one hand in the other, said, "I am prepared; I will remain and perish with the ship."

Senator Wade on the Crisis.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette thus gives the result of an interview with Senator Wade:

In the outset it may be said that Mr. Wade displays a feeling, with reference to the great duty that is about to come upon him, very creditable to his judgment, and very little in accord with some popular notions of his character. "I don't suppose anybody will believe me," he says; "at least, it is the fashion not to believe such things, and so I suppose there's no use saying it; but, in truth, I would a great deal rather escape this seeming prospect of the Presidency than not, if I could do it honorably, and without desertion of duty. I don't mean to say that I wouldn't like to be President—I would be a fool to say that. But to be a piece of a President—to go in for a fragment of a year, in the midst of the excitement of the Presidential election when there is so much to do and so little time to do it, is not a thing to be coveted. Under the circumstances, there's no great honor in it; it's only my fortune to be in the place that may make make it necessary; and there's no chance of much of a career in it.—I'll have plenty of time to make thousands of enemies by my appointments, and not time enough to make many friends by my administration."

"Now, I would like," continued the bluff old veteran with characteristic frankness. "I would like to stay where I am, and I don't make any secret of it. This is something that I think I know something about. I've been in Congress a long time, and I believe I know what a member of Congress ought to do. If I can't step in the Senate, than I should like to get as near to it as I can, by presiding over it. As for your presidency, I haven't tried it; and I know very well that its duties require a different order of faculties and different kind of work. I've never had the presidential fever very bad. The Senate was good enough for me, and if I'd had my own way, there wouldn't have been much likelihood of my ever trying to get out of it. There is one thing I've fully made up my mind to; whatever else may be done, I shall try, if the power is put into my hand, to bring the Executive Department of the Government into harmony with the Legislature.

"I don't believe that a President ought to be setting himself as a policy maker. When I am asked what my policy will be in case I have to discharge the Presidential duties, I generally answer that I won't have any policy. It's the duty of Congress to have a policy, and the duty of the President to execute it. We've had trouble enough from the efforts of Presidents to set up a policy for themselves, and force Congress into its adoption, by the use of the Government patronage and otherwise.

"The very first thing I should try, if such a thing as we are talking about should happen, would be to see to it that the real Union men of the South are protected. Those people down there have made us enough of trouble, first by their treason, and since the surrender by their continual turbulence. I don't believe they have ever been ruled with a firm enough hand. I am of course in favor of giving them justice always; but they must not interfere with the rights of others or disobey the laws.

"And there's one more point that I've long had my mind made up about. I believe that in levying taxes we ought to keep our eyes steadily on one principle, which should govern us throughout: we should strive to take the burdens off industry, and to secure our laboring classes relief from foreign competition."

"That means tariff, pretty strong, doesn't it, Mr. Wade?"

"Yes, that means tariff pretty strong; it means a high tariff. We can't protect our laboring classes any other way half so well."

Mr. Wade is as anxious as anybody for a fair, impartial trial, in which everything shall be heard that can be brought forward for defence. "The American people," he exclaimed, "would permit nothing else, even if we desired it here. The love of fair play is a nation's characteristic, and I am very proud that it is so. But I do object, and so will the country at large, to any motions for more delay, or any pettifogging. I told Hendricks, the other day, that I'd like to know if he had consulted his client when he was objecting to my being sworn in. I told him Andy and I had always been pretty good friends, if he would let politics alone, and I would not believe that he thought he would not get justice from me till he said so himself. The truth is, though I'm getting almost afraid to have any more jokes with anybody, they're all getting to attach such a high and mighty importance to whatever I say. Why I can't say a word about Cabinets, for example—can't give any of my old friends a side-winder on that—for fear of being thought serious. Though when it comes to being serious about it, I wish they'd all remember that I'm likely to try and find out whether I need a Cabinet before I begin the selection of one. And as to that whole business of office hunting, I wish the public to know that—if I should have the task of making appointments—nobody's going to be benefitted by having come here now to bore me about it.

It isn't true, he said, in answer to a question, that I'm not on good terms with Grant. I've always been cordial with him. The story of my saying that when I talked politics he talked horse is a pure invention of the man that wrote it. I never said that, nor anything like it.

Planting Trees.

The season for transplanting fruit and ornamental trees is again near at hand. There are few if any persons owning houses and lots or farms, whose comfort will not be promoted and the appearance and value of their property improved by the judicious planting of fruit, shade and ornamental trees. Of the desirableness of an abundant supply of fine fruit it is unnecessary to speak. Let all, who have not already an abundant supply, go to the nearest nursery without delay and select and plant the best varieties that can be had; it always pays to get the best. Don't be too saving and say I will got the grafts and raise the trees myself; unless you have old trees on which to graft, this is the worst kind of economy; you can buy three or four year old trees from the nursery for a very little more than it would cost you to graft them, and you gain four or five years and as many crops of fruit. A word for shade and ornamental trees. We admire the combining of beauty with utility wherever it can be done, but don't believe in sacrificing everything to utility. We believe in making our homes attractive, whether in town or country, and in no way can it be done more cheaply or permanently than by planting a judicious selection of shade and ornamental trees and shrubbery. Once planted and growing, they last for a generation and increase in beauty with the passing years. We pity the man who from a false economy, or through neglect permits his home to stand exposed to the fierce blasts of winter and the broiling sun of summer, without an effort to beautify or protect it; nor do we wonder that his children are glad to leave it and seek more genial and attractive homes among strangers. Make the old home attractive without with fruit and shade trees and ornamental shrubs, vines and flowers, and within, with books, papers, and pictures, warm hearts, kind words and smiling faces and however wide your children wonder, they will oft find their way back to their childhood's home, and its memory, a thing of beauty, will be a joy forever, and enshrined in their hearts, will be cherished while life lasts. So say the Bedford Inquirer—every word true.

The Snow Storm in the East.

The Philadelphia Evening Herald of Saturday says:

"The police lieutenants of the Eighteenth and the Sixteenth wards reported to the Mayor this morning that upon the open lots on their respective beats the snow had drifted by actual measurement to the depth of from fifteen to eighteen feet deep. In Norris Square the great mounds are likely to remain until next June. The picture all over the city is decidedly arctic."

NEW YORK, March 21.—The snow storm, which commenced here at two o'clock this morning, is unprecedented at this season. The snow fell over four inches deep, but drifted badly in the streets, and the cars were everywhere greatly delayed.

BOSTON, March 21.—A snow storm gale of unusual violence commenced at three o'clock this morning. Several inches of snow has fallen and drifted. The horse-cars have been compelled to withdraw, and the railroad trains are delayed on most roads in the vicinity.

Steamboat Disaster.

CINCINNATI, March 18.—The steamboat Magnolia, Cincinnati and Maysville regular packet, which left here at noon to-day with about 100 cabin passengers and a large amount of freight, exploded her boilers when twelve miles above the city. The greater portion of the cabin was carried away, and the boat afterwards took fire. About forty persons were killed, several being burned to death.

The scene at the time of the explosion was terrible. Some were blown high into the air; others were blown into the river, where they struggled to keep from drowning, and many lay scattered here and there on the wreck horribly mangled, scalded and burning to death.

—Services in the Episcopal Church on next Sabbath, at the usual hours, by the Rev. Mr. Speer, of Altoona.

—Mr. Jonathan Rhule of Milesburg, Centre county, has been awarded the contract to build the Blair county jail, for $64,000.

—The largest and most handsome stock of new styles of Wall Paper ever received in Huntingdon, for sale at Lewis' Book Store. Call and see.

—Two persons were baptised in the waters of the canal on Sunday last, by Rev. J. W. Plannet, minister in charge of the Baptist church of this place.

—The new city of Altoona has resolved to pay its Mayor $400 per annum; Chief of Police $600; Clerk $125; and Solicitor $125. How sweet but dear it is to put on airs.

—Our subscribers who intend changing their post-office address about the first of April, will please notify us of the fact, so that we can make the necessary alterations.

—Graham's steam saw mill, situated about three miles east of Lewistown, was totally destroyed by fire early on Saturday morning. Loss of about $2,000; insured for $1200.

—The Post-office Directory just published shows 25,712 post offices in the United States. 1,226 of them are money-order offices, and about June 1st, 200 more are to be created.

—The Republicans of Juniata county voted on the 10th instant for and against the Crawford county system. The vote stood 478 for, and 100 against, making the majority for the system 372.

—Improvements in West Huntingdon still continue, and the improvements in the borough proper are about to commence. We say let them go on, until every lot has a house, and every house a family.

—In a furore: our citizens over the alarm of fire at Fishers' saw mill. A meeting in the Methodist Church was hastily broken up, and many of our citizens were running—they didn't know where.

—A young man residing in Gallitzin recently robbed his father of fifty dollars, and started for Pittsburg. The telegraph got ahead of him, and he was arrested and sent back to his father for correction.

—A son of Mr. Samuel P. Foster, miller at Ironsville, near Tyrone, was drowned on Monday. It appears that his hat dropped into the water, and while in the act of reaching for it, he fell in, the current drawing him under the ice.

—Great snow storms prevailed in the East last week. At White Hall, near Philadelphia, the snow had drifted to the depth of five feet, detaining the trains on the read for several hours.—No snow fell this side of Harrisburgh of any consequence.

—Col. John Piper on Wednesday attempted to cross the river at Hollidaysburg, in a sulky, but was upset. The water was high and it was with difficulty that he swam to the shore.—The horse and sulky went down the stream, but were finally got out with safety.

—Radical Restoration. Its good effects are permanent. It not only restores the color of the hair, but the quantity and natural glossiness. This is said by every one using Mrs. S. A Allen's improved (new style) Hair Restorer or Dressing, (in one bottle.) Every Druggist sells it. Price one Dollar.

—An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure. A little prudence at this season of the year, in regard to health, may save you weeks of suffering and innumerable doctor bills. Beware of the temptation to sit in rooms without fire, or take long walks and sit down in the shade on damp seats to rest, in the first days of Spring. Don't take off woolen clothing before the first of June.

Prof. Agassiz says the time will come when every man who has water on his ground will raise fish for his own table as he now raises fruit. We cannot see why it shouldn't be so; but we must confess we don't see how it will unless our people manifest more energy in the subject of fisheries than they do at present. We think we will be safe in saying that Agassiz is looking very far into the future.

—Rev. J. W. Plannett will lead the Bible Class in the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association, on Sunday afternoon next, at 3½ o'clock. The public is invited. We will add that an arrangement has been effected by which the different ministers in town will be afforded the same opportunity to give instruction from the Bible, and it is desirable that all our young men attend.

— The fixtures and stock of a Grocery Store for sale, and the room for rent, located in Main street in the business part of the town. This is a good opening for any person with a small capital wishing to go into the business. Terms easy. Other business requires all the attention of the present owner. Inquire at this office.

—The town council of the borough of Tyrone has appointed one chief fire Marshal, and five assistants, to take the charge and control of all citizens attending fires that may occur in that place. This is a very good suggestion and we hope to see our borough fathers profit by it. A fire is something that needs skilful management, and no fire can be managed successfully if the control is left to a few excitable citizens who assume to be the head.

—A slight fire broke out in Fishers' saw mill in this place on Saturday evening last. Some of the workmen were employed in steaming barrel staves, and left some fire remain in furnace, which was blown out by the high wind and communicated to the shavings. At one time the whole underneath of the mill was on fire, but was successfully mastered by the exertions of some of our citizens. The fire had the effect of awakening our citizens from their lethargy, and revived to some extent the subject of fire apparatus, &c.

The Fancy Dress Party.

The leap year fancy dress party, which was held at the Morrison House, of this place, on Tuesday evening, was a grand success. There were present about 30 couple, of whom the majority were dressed in a variety of costumes, representing respective nationalities and characters. It would be needless to specify the characters, but no small degree of taste was displayed in all of them. The evening was passed pleasantly, and all enjoyed themselves hugely, only regretting that the "we sma' hours" came so soon to break the general joyousness of the scene. It is to be hoped that parties of this nature will be the feature of every returning Leap Year.

When it is known that the arrangements for the party were made by the ladies, and the expenses of the supper and music paid by them, the public will understand that some of the Huntingdon ladies can carry a point and be as successful in what they undertake as some of the more experienced gentlemen. The originators of the party deserve great credit for their indomitable perseverance in surmounting all obstacles and completing all arrangements with such skill.

Painful Accident and Death.

Mr. Andrew Grove, his wife and two children, residing about two miles from Marklesburg, visited that village on Friday last in a two horse wagon. On their return home and while going down hill, the horses became frightened at an umbrella which they had hoisted and immediately ran off. They could not be checked, as one of the bridle bits broke. In their descent down the hill Mr. and Mrs. Grove were thrown out together, and each of the children shortly after. Mrs. Grove was so seriously injured that she died the same evening. Mr. Grove escaped injury. One of the children, a boy of about seven years, had his arm broken, and the other child, a girl of about six years, was badly cut about the head, and its life is despaired of. The accident has awakened the deepest sympathy in that community in behalf of the afflicted family.

Accident.

Mr. Reuben Rudy, of Shavers Creek, met with a serious accident, under the following circumstances, on Friday evening last: He got on the Cincinnati Express going East, and finding that he was in the wrong train, he made an effort to jump off as the train was in motion. He was of course thrown back against the car, and by some means or other his foot was caught between the wheel and the tie and a bone broken. He was carried to the Station house, and his wounds were properly dressed by the Company's physician in this place, Dr. D. P. Miller. It is thought that the amputation of his leg will not be necessary.

Fire.

The dwelling house of Wm. S. Lincoln, in Walker township, was destroyed by fire on Friday evening last, supposed to have originated from a stove pipe. Through the exertion of the family and a few neighbors the principal part of the bedding and some furniture was saved. All the provisions in the cellar and garret were destroyed.

☞ Professor Hugh Coyle, the well known and efficient music teacher, who has been giving instructions on the piano and violin in this place for the last nine years, has sold his furniture, etc., and gone to Philadelphia. Many of our best instrumental players in town received their first instructions from Prof. Coyle, and they as well as the community at large will regret his departure. We hope the Professor abundant success in his new sphere.

Speer's Wines

Are the pure juice of the grape, and are unexcelled by any native vintage. They contain valuable medicinal properties, and are of intrinsic worth to the invalid and the convalescent, strengthening the weak, and restoring the system to tone and vigor. Sickly persons and females should try them.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

THE REASON why MISHLER'S HERB BITTERS cures so many different diseases, is because it is the best remedy for a deranged stomach, or Dyspepsia, now known, and because it invigorates the entire system, strengthens the nervous fibres, elevates the standard of all the vital forces, and sustains a most healthful tone of the entire human organism. Medicine that will do this, will cure any disease, for the simple reason, that nature will do the rest.

We guarantee, that no woman or child, however pale or emaciated, can use these Bitters regularly for twenty-one days, without the return of the rosy cheeks and fair complexion characteristic of good health.
